Intersection

 Intersection: the set containing the elements in both A and B

$$A \cap B = \{x \mid x \in A \land x \in B\}$$

This mathematic operation is suitable to describe multilingual databases of librarianship terminology which are increasingly becoming diverse as well as parallel regarding the number of equivalent terminological elements.

New technologies have been most affected the speed of the usage of terminology data. Within the environment of printed communication, the speed of the discovery of such data was extremely slow, in digital communication such intersections becomes more chaotic and often incidental for their quality and trustworthiness.

At present, when there is a huge variety of methods for standardizing lexicographic products and terminology, professionals are once again largely appreciating printed dictionaries and considering them a warrant for quality and stability of terms guaranteed by lexicographers, whose creative effort is less time intensive and more unbound than that of creators of terminology standards or builders or administrators of databases.

The report has the purpose to survey Latvian and Lithuanian online resources and present analysis of common terminological resources in order to find new effective ways for professional communication in this area. There are several factors making the comparative analysis of Latvian and Lithuanian professional terminology very perspective: proximity of languages, joint efforts in terminology activities and similar experiences in control of librarianship terminology.

Regularly appearing studies in Latvian and Lithuanian linguistics enrich both sides with varied sources and tools for the development of professional terminology. Synchronic and diachronic research into various aspects of language studies as well as those addressing cross-linguistic issues are the focus of the international journal of linguistics Kalbotyra published by Vilnius University's Faculty of Philology since 1958. Then there are the journals published by the Institute of the Lithuanian Language: Acta Linguistica Lithuanica ("Issues of Lithuanian Linguistics") containing articles and reviews regarding issues of Lithuanian and Baltic linguistics and philology as well as comparative and general linguistics and the journal dedicated to terminology Terminologija.

Two similar journals are published by the Institute of the Latvian Language at the University of Latvia:

Onomastica Lettica since 1990 and the research journal Linquistica Lettica since 1997.

Terminology development in Latvia: Present

The Terminology Commission's decisions have the status of normative documents, and terms approved by the Terminology Commission are official. The Terminology Commission consists of 30 subject-field terminology subcommissions. The terminological database of this Commission (Akadēmiskā terminu datubāze, AkadTerm) contains 1 098 888 terms.

Terminology management in Lithuania: Present

Terminology management at the state level

- State Commission of the Lithuanian Language
- Terminology Commission of the Lithuanian Standards Board
- Terminology commissions at other LT state institutions

Analysis of intersections of Latvian and Lithuanian librarianship terms showed that equivalents of these terms differ in forms and methods of their presentation in analogous databases because of the use of different lexicographic sources. Purposeful choice of proper sources, their regular updating and technological control has become one of the most important issues in terminology harmonization.

It is also clear from the analysis that libraries, besides being the first to joint the national standartization activity managed according to international and European standartization principles, were playing the role of coordinators for standartization in the area of information and documentation; and in this way, were the principal drivers for the multi-stage transformation of the Technical Committee LST/TC 47 when experts from the leading national archives, museums, research and government institutions, as well as private agencies, joined standartization activity.

Martynas Mažvydas National Library of Lithuania, manages the standardization committee LST TK 47 Information and documentation. We are finishing the translation into Lithuanian of the 2nd version of the international standard ISO 5127:2017. Information and documentation - Foundation and vocabulary. The standardized terms from the 1st version of the standard LST ISO 5127:2008 Information and documentation -Vocabulary as well as other standardized terms from international and national standards can be found in the database of terms of the Lithuanian Standards Board. The analysis shows that the most precise intersections of terms are observed in translations of international standards.

Since standardization of librarianship terms became the most important area of the terminological activity, prompt sharing of information regarding translation of international standards would ensure a qualitative flow of equivalents of professional Latvian and Lithuanian terms.

Apžvalga

Bibliotekininkystės, kaip ir bet kurios kitos dalykinės srities terminologijos darbai, gali būti pateikiami

To date, almost 600 Lithuanian terminological dictionaries have been published: about 20 dictionaries every year during the period of 2004–2007 and 11 dictionaries in 2017. During 2018, the Terminology Board at the Martynas Mažvydas National Library of Lithuania discussed 7 000 Lithuanian librarianship terms with their equivalents in English. The current focus is on the new bilingual "Lithuanian -English Dictionary Librarianship, Information and Book Science Terms" containing 7800 Lithuanian terms. A new multilingual dictionary of library terms is under preparation. It should include terms in English, Lithuanian, French, Russian and German. Its conceptual framework is not in place yet and is awaiting possibilities for being a subject in professional cooperation. In this regard, of much value have been studies of the terminological Latvian experience

Apžvalga

Bibliotekininkystės, kaip ir bet kurios kitos dalykinės srities terminologijos darbai, gali būti pateikiami

Professional terminology is created and developed in circumstances of universal communication, when a language is considered only a communication tool—without impact of its fundamental function, that of preserving culture and identity. For this reason, unique terminological solutions of librarians from neighbouring countries are of great importance for fostering national terminological databases and integrating them into global international networks.

Online search for multilingual intersections of librarianship terms not only helps find the best results from comparative terminological analysis but also provides numerous additional means for finding new creative solutions.

In the words of the Lithuanian terminologist Antanas Smetona "the term is a creative product of any intellect". Therefore purposeful development of multilingual virtual environment could serve as a creative workshop based on mathematical operations and principles.
